Fourth Session of the Legislature Opened

Alberta's Law Makers Are Assembled at Edmonton to Enter Upon the Last Session Before Again Seeking the Confidence of the Electorate—
Was a Pleasing Mid-Winter Scene

Coming Railway Policy is Foreshadowed by the Speech

Redistribution Act, Municipal Act, Registration of Voters and Other Important Legislation Promised—Review of the Excellent Work
Already Performed by the Government of the Province

Edmonton, Jan. 14.—The fourth and last session of the first legislature of Alberta was opened at 3 o'clock this afternoon by his honor, Lieutenant-Governor Bulyea. The brisk winter's day added smartness to the scene as everyone was garbed in furs and the sprightliness of Canadian life was in evidence on every hand. There was just enough of the military touch to keep up the traditions. There was a large attendance of members and the citizens of Edmonton turned out in force. The speech from the throne was read by the lieutenant-governor as follows:

Mr. Speaker and gentlemen of the Legislative Assembly.—It is with great pleasure that I welcome you to the fourth session of the first legislature of the province of Alberta.

Our thanks are due to Providence for the increasing prosperity of the province and for its exemption from material disasters. Our sympathy has been evoked during the year by the terrible forest fires in the neighboring province of British Columbia, marked especially by the destruction of the city of Fernie, and our admiration has been equally evoked by the firmness with which that catastrophe has been met. The recent earthquake in Italy calls for our heartfelt sympathy and is an awful reminder of our mortal state.

The continuation of peace within and without the empire is a matter for sincere gratitude, and I trust that the wisdom of those in control of affairs may preserve inviolate.

The year has been marked by the celebration of the 300th anniversary of the landing of Champlain in the St. Lawrence.

The festivities at Quebec, honored as they were by the gracious presence of the liege-apparent, were of course primarily of a Canadian and Imperial character. They served, however, to emphasize the good understanding between the mother country of the two races to which our Dominion mainly owes its settlement as well as the fact that within the dominion itself division between those races has ceased to exist.

The relation of Canada with the United States show continued improvement and a desire on each side of the line to cement the friendship so necessary to both.

The good offices of his Majesty's ambassador at Washington, the Right Honorable James Bryce, have been of the greatest service in this regard. An invitation has been issued to his excellency the Governor General and to the Right Honorable Sir Wilfred Laurier, and has been accepted by them to take part in the conference for the preservation of the natural resources of the continent which is to be held at Washington which should be fraught with valuable results with respect to our forests, waterpowers and minerals.

In commercial and agricultural affairs the year has been marked by the gradual restoration of normal conditions and by a bountiful harvest. The prosperity of the farmers and their renewed ability to meet payments have at once been reflected in the financial condition of the commercial classes and in impulse to the flow of immigration.

THE GREATEST PROBLEM.
The great problem of transportation facilities has been receiving the most anxious consideration of my government.

In the vast country to the north of us with all its agricultural and mineral possibilities and in the mining and wheat producing districts of the south, the province has two assets of which the value can only be guessed until they have been penetrated and traversed by railways.

The south country is already tapped but it needs, and will need as time goes on in an increasing measure, more and more arteries through which its riches can flow.

The north has not at present a single line, and without a line it is impossible to measure the vastness of its future. Several bills will be submitted for your approval authorizing my government to assist the railway development of the country.

Both north and south will be found to be cared for in the bills presented. The already existing facilities in the centre of the province will be very considerably improved.

The municipal requirements of the province, insofar as the cities are concerned, have been heretofore met by special charter, but it appears desirable that provision should be made for uniformity in this respect.

A bill will be presented to you with this object in view.

REDISTRIBUTION BILL.

My government will submit to you two bills dealing with the constitution of this House. A bill respecting the Legislative Assembly provides for an increase in the number of representatives corresponding to the increase in the population of the country and enabling the people more accurately and readily to give expression to their wishes.

The necessary proposals as to the redistribution of seats have been framed carefully with these ends in view.

What the election bill substitutes are more in line with the new provincial life than were provided by the territorial ordinance, which worked sufficiently well in a sparsely settled country, but the machinery of which was unsuited to modern conditions.

The bill is based on a system providing for the registration of voters. A careful review of the existing provincial acts has resulted in the compilation of a measure which it is thought embodies the best features of all and will, I trust, meet with your unanimous approval.

CHILDREN'S PROTECTIVE ACT.

A bill will be submitted to you entitled a Children's Protection Bill. Experience has shown that with the growth of the population of the province there is an increasing need for care and watchfulness in this regard. The bill will give orders to take charge of children who have offended against the laws or who are in danger of being thrown into this position, and will enable them to be placed and kept in healthy surroundings in foster-homes on farms or elsewhere under indenture.

I trust that such provision will have a beneficial effect on a class that is assured of our most careful attention.

APPOINT AN OFFICIAL GUARDIAN.

In a previous session it was provided that the care and maintenance of the insane should not be thrown entirely on the public, but that the estate of the patient should contribute equitably. This policy has to some extent been carried out, but it has been hampered by the lack of an official guardian and the necessity of applying to the courts for the appointment of a guardian in each case, thus involving the estate and the province in unnecessary expenses. An amendment to the act concerning insane persons will be presented to you appointing the Attorney-General official guardian of the estates of such persons, thus enabling him economically to carry out his present discretionary powers.

ALSO SOME OTHER BILLS.

Legislation embodying other necessary amendments to the statute law of the province will also be laid before you.

Mr. Speaker and gentlemen of the Legislative Assembly.—In submitting these measures to your consideration I think I may legitimately refer to the beneficial effect of your past labors.

In connection with the development of the country the work done by the department of public works has been of marked value; roads, bridges and ferries have brought men in closer touch with one another and facilitated the outflow of their products.

The government telephone system is furthering this work. Many public buildings have been completed or are in the course of erection.

A good beginning has been made

Synopsis of Canadian North-West Land Regulations

ANY person who is the sole head of a family, or any male over 18 years of age, may homestead a quarter-section of available Dominion land in Manitoba, Saskatchewan or Alberta. The applicant must appear in person at the Dominion Lands Agency or Sub-Agency for the district. Entry by proxy may be made at any agency, on certain conditions, by father, mother, son, daughter, brother or sister of intending homesteader.
Duties.—Six months' residence upon and cultivation of the land in each of the three years. A homesteader may live within nine miles of his homestead on a farm of at least 80 acres solely owned and occupied by him or by his father, mother, son, daughter, brother or sister.
In certain districts a homesteader in good standing may pre-empt a quarter-section alongside his homestead. Price $1.00 per acre. Duties.—Must reside six months in each of six years from date of homestead entry including the time required to earn homestead patent and cultivate fifty acres extra.
A homesteader who has exhausted his homestead right and cannot obtain a pre-emption may take a purchased homestead in certain districts. Price $1.00 per acre. Duties.—Must reside six months in each of three years, cultivate 80 acres and erect a house worth $300.00.

ALBERTA LEGISLATURE OPENED

The Alberta Legislature was opened last Thursday with the usual ceremonies by Lieut.-Governor Bulyea. The speech from the throne announced the following items of legislation:

Improved transportation facilities.
Redistribution of the seats.
The new election act.
Legislation in regard to municipalities.
Legislation for the better protection of children.
Amendments to the statute law.

RAILWAY NEEDED

There is no section of Alberta in greater need of a railway than the country to the north and south of Taber. Take a map and you will plainly see that for miles east and west of a line running north and south of Taber the settlers have no railway facilities. To develop this great expanse of fertile wheat land a railroad is necessary. Were a railroad constructed from the United States boundary, running north through the immense coal fields at Taber and on up through the vast stretch of country lying north of Taber, this country would develop and be in a very short time one of the greatest wheat-producing sections in Alberta. No railroad could today be constructed in Alberta that would do more to develop the country. Such a line would cross several of the present railroads and thus become a profitable feeder for each of these railroads. To bring this matter before our member (Mr. Donald McNabb) and the government the Taber Board of Trade is sending Mr. R. P. Wallace to Edmonton next week.

COUNCIL TAKES FIRST STEP FOR WATER- WORKS

The Town Council has taken the first step to secure a waterworks system for Taber, and it is their intention to go ahead and secure the best possible system they can. This is as it should be and every ratepayer of the town should do all in his power to assist them. The man who will stand and chew the rag and growl on the street corner, and do all in his power to throw discredit upon the possibility of the town having a water system, should be well, it would be too bad to pollute the river with his carcass.

The Council has had a communication from Messrs. Galt & Smith, consulting engineers, Toronto, and they agree to make the necessary surveys, report upon the best possible supply of water, give an estimate of the cost and general plans showing the whole system. This would include all information necessary to properly present the project and a by-law to the ratepayers. The Council has wired accepting the terms for this preliminary work and the survey will be started at once.

There should be no delay or stop until Taber has an efficient waterworks system. Remember, waterworks is cheaper than fireworks!

Notes and Comments

Edmonton is only charging eight cents a kilowatt hour for electric light. This is a very reasonable price and it is said the light is good. Calgary pays fourteen cents.

Ninety per cent. of the sheep in Alberta are in the southern part of the province. Sunny Southern Alberta is a great sheep country and sheep-raising is one of the most profitable enterprises in the West.

Geo. V. Hinueber Dead

The sad news reached here Friday of the death that morning of Geo. V. Hinueber at the Galt Hospital. He had been ill for about three weeks suffering from typhoid fever, but being a strong athletic young man it was not thought that it would prove fatal. However, he suddenly took a turn for the worse and passed away.

George was well known in Taber as he conducted a barber shop here for some time. He sold out a little over a year ago and went to Lethbridge, where he was employed in Alf. Hoselton's parlors. In Taber George was one of the popular young men and took a great interest in the baseball team. He belonged to the Oddfellows' Lodge here and the lodge defrayed all the expenses of the funeral which took place at Lethbridge on Sunday. It was impossible for the members of the Taber Lodge to turn out en masse and conduct the funeral, so the Lethbridge brethren took charge for them. Several of the members went up to pay their last sad respects to their deceased brother.

What Labor Men Want

Of the Dominion House

Annual Jaunt of the Executive of the Dominion Trades Congress to Ottawa

A deputation, representing the Dominion Trades and Labor Congress including Alphonse Verreille, M.P., president, and James Simpson, vice-president, waited on Laurier, Lomieux and Oliver with a memorial expressing the appreciation of the congress for the good work done by the department of labor and urging the government to create a portfolio of minister of labor. The memorial also asks for the appointment of inspectors to inspect all gears, tackle, etc., used in the process of loading and unloading of vessels in all Canadian ports; that legislation make it compulsory for candidates at federal elections to deposit $300 be repealed, and that election day be made a public holiday; that the government make such provisions as will ensure the strict enforcement of the fair wages schedule in every government contract; that immediate increase in salary be granted the letter carriers, and that assisted immigration and granting of bonuses be strenuously opposed; that undesirable be prohibited from immigrating to Canada, including Chinese, Hindus, and all other Asiatics; that a technical education commission be appointed to make a thorough investigation in the development of technical education in other countries and report its effects upon industries and commercial development.

The Calgary City Council has endorsed the proposition to install steam power plant for the street railway.

Taber Agricultural Society

First Annual Seed Grain and Poultry Fair

Prize Winners

The first annual seed fair and poultry show was held last Friday. The weather was anything but favorable, it being so cold that the farmers from a distance could not well attend. To bring in poultry was out of the question as the birds would have frozen on the way. Those living near town were the only ones who had any chance of making exhibits. Those who did bring out their seed grain and poultry have reason to feel proud as their exhibits would have taken a high standing at any exhibition. On the whole the fair may be said to have been a success considering the unfavorable weather, and there is likely to develop a healthy rivalry that will make coming exhibitions more interesting and of greater benefit to the people. The following are the prize winners:—

In the evening T. B. R. Henderson of Edmonton (chief weed inspector) lectured on "Seed Grain and Noxious Weeds."

The Alberta Farmers' Chance

It has been pretty thoroughly demonstrated that alfalfa can be grown over a great part of Southern Alberta and it is further known that the soil is benefited by the crop. The gospel of alfalfa has been preached for some time, but unlike many another gospel it has had numerous demonstrations of the practicability of its use. With alfalfa grown occasionally to rest and revive the land, the enervating effects of winter wheat growing will hardly be noticed, but if the Southern Alberta farmers persist in using their land exclusively for wheat and oats, they will shortly be met with crops of weeds and exhausted soils. It is a rare advantage for any district that the possibility of growing legumes is discovered early in its settlement, but there also goes with the discovery a responsibility of making use of the opportunity. There is no more urgent advice to be offered than that given by Mr. Woolford "to prepare plant and care for a plot of alfalfa."

There is six feet of snow in the Fernie district.

Fourth Session of Legislature Opened

of the future home of this Assembly upon the hill about us.

The revenues of the province have been handled by the treasury with economy and accuracy.

Education has been facilitated all over the province. A large number of new school districts have been organized and the interests of higher education have been materially advanced.

HAVE HELPED THE FARMER.

The agricultural department has availed itself of the machinery placed at its disposal by various acts and has materially assisted in the development of the wealth of the country. Co-operation, both in the production and marketing of the principal agricultural products, has brought substantial returns to the pockets of the farmers.

The fight against weeds, fire and other enemies has been carried out unflinchingly to the general good.

Administration of justice has been facilitated and simplified by the supreme and district court acts. Many who had previously to make long and expensive journeys to obtain judicial adjustment of their affairs now have courts held periodically almost at their doors.

Everywhere the new provincial life which is stirring so strongly has been guided and founded. I feel assured that the measures which I have mentioned, together with others which may be introduced, will receive your most careful consideration and that your deliberations will be conducted, as in the past, to the prosperity and well-being of the province.

By the Way

The meek may inherit the earth, but the mortgage is held by the other fellow.

Uncle John—Yep; but from the way she's been actin' since she got to the farm, I reckon it oughter be called the abnormal school.—Puck

When I was last in India," said a traveller, "they were taking the census. The returns were most remarkable. In the Allahabad census thirty-five citizens described themselves as 'men who rob by threats of violence.' There were 226 'flat-terers for gain.' There were twenty-five 'hereditary thieves.' There were twenty-nine 'howlers at funerals.' There were 145 'ear cleaners.' There were twenty-six 'makers of crowns for idols.' There were fourteen 'hereditary painters of horses with spots.' There were nine 'professional false witnesses.'"

Their Green Gown.

By CLARISSA MACKIE.

Copyright, 1904, by Associated Literary Press.

"I'd love to go, Aunt Lily, but you know I haven't a decent thing to wear," Mildred looked wistfully at the invitation in her hand.

Miss Weston thoughtfully turned a worn little ring on her finger as she surveyed her pretty niece.

They looked very much alike, Miss Lily and young Mildred, only the aunt was slender to thinness and her once golden hair had faded to ashen blond, but her eyes were as beautiful and long lashed and full of depth and sweetness as they had been fifteen years ago, and her skin was as fair and her lips were as red as Mildred's.

"The check book tells a sorry tale, dear," she said at length, "but perhaps I can help you out of my magic clothes press."

"Aunt Lily! I can't take anything more from you. You have given me your embroidered muslin and the pink silk—and I have worn them out. Don't tempt me!" The girl covered her ears and closed her eyes tightly.

"Don't be foolish, Mildred," protested Miss Weston. "I want you to go to the Patterson dance, and you must have a new gown. My green tissue can be altered and will make you a sweet gown. Come to my room and try it on."

Reluctantly Mildred followed her aunt to the pretty front room where the older woman spent much of her time.

The furniture was rather old-fashioned, but of the quality, for it had

"I HAD SEEN YOUR GREEN GOWN BEFORE, MISS WESTON," said Mildred, "but I had been purchased in the days before Lily Weston had lost most of her fortune."

Miss Weston spread the green gown on the bed and surveyed it with a strange yearning in her eyes. It was of the silken tissue in a tender leaf-green and embroidered here and there with a tiny golden star.

A pair of green slippers with gold buckles and green stockings were tucked in one corner of the box from which the gown had been produced.

"It is lovely, Aunt Lily! I suppose you have worn it to dances too."

"I wore it more than once, Mildred, and had the lady's maid alter it for me. Now you must wear it, and I hope you will be equally happy." She bent and kissed the girl tenderly, and Mildred felt a warm drop on her cheek but when she looked at her aunt Miss Weston was smiling.

"Come," she said blithely, "get your workbasket."

Mildred danced with tireless energy at the Patterson ball. The green gown was vastly becoming to her fair beauty, and she had never looked more charming.

Lester Stearns had succumbed to her loveliness and in the fragrant coolness of the conservatory he asked her to marry him. She was radiant with happiness when Mrs. Patterson approached her, followed by a tall stranger.

"Mildred, dear, Captain Gray has requested an introduction to 'the girl in the green gown'!" Miss Lane—Captain Gray's now, Mrs. Stearns—may take me into the supper room." With a little nod she was gone with the reluctant lover.

Mildred looked at her new acquaintance, and decided at once that she would like him. He was a man in the prime of life, with a broad, rugged face that told of an out-of-door life. Strength and kindliness were in his gray eyes and vigor in his large, well-muscled frame.

"I have seen your gown before," said Captain Gray abruptly.

"You must be mistaken," laughed Mildred. "I have never worn it until this evening."

"It was worn by a girl who looked just as you do. It is fifteen years ago that I saw her last, and she wore the green gown."

"It must have been Aunt Lily," said Mildred constrainedly.

"It was Lily Weston—then," said Mildred. "And she is just as sweet and lovely now as she ever was, I am sure."

"I am sure of that, too," he remarked gravely.

"I had no frock to wear tonight, and I wanted to come so badly, and Aunt Lily brought this out for me, and I was the dearest thing she owned, yet she lent it to me."

"She was always unselfish and loyal to the core, and I could never understand—"

"He paused and looked at her strangely, wistfully.

"What?" asked Mildred warmly. She suspected a romance in the past of sweet Aunt Lily.

"I am a simple sailor man, Miss Lane, and I confess to not understanding the ways of women. I was a lieutenant in the navy when I met Lily Weston and fell in love with her. We became engaged and were to be married. This green gown I brought her from China, and she wore it several times while I was on leave. We had a foolish quarrel one night, my last night ashore. It was a matter of trifling jealousy on my part, and before the evening was over I had seen my folly. I wrote on a programme that I was repentant and asked her to meet me in a certain cozy nook on the stairs." He paused and sighed.

"And?" suggested Mildred.

"She was surrounded by admirers, and as I had no other opportunity I slipped the programme into her hand as we passed each other while dancing."

"And then?"

"She never came. I waited until after midnight, and then when I had seen her depart with her friends I left. I have never seen her since." Captain Gray's voice shook a little as he concluded his story.

"How utterly ridiculous!" exclaimed Mildred. "Why, it seems to me if you truly loved her, other you would have quarrelled, and yet you have never forgotten Aunt Lily, and she—why, it is your picture that is on her dressing table—a young officer in a cap and uniform!"

"You are sure?" The captain bent over her eagerly.

"Positive. Come and see us tomorrow, Captain Gray. I am sure she will be glad to see you," cried Mildred impulsively, holding out her hand.

"Thank you, I will," he said resolutely.
